Global Studies (BA/BS)

Formerly known as international studies, global studies is an interdisciplinary major. What this means is that students can tailor majors to their own specific interests. Global studies provides an excellent general education for students interested in the complex interrelationships (political, economic, social, and cultural) of our interdependent modern world. The program offers students tools to make sense of a fast-changing global arena; it ensures the practical application of their research; and it immerses them in the language, history, and culture of a major world region.

Program Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of this program, students will be able to:

- Critical Thinking: Use analytical tools to examine global issues in the primary thematic areas of the department: international development, culture and globalization, gender and development, environmental sustainability, global health and well-being, and cross-cultural communication and understanding. Critically analyze the complex interrelationships that exist among first nations, nation states and between peoples, and civil society organizations and the environment throughout the interdependent modern world.
- Critical Thinking: Contrast methods of interdisciplinary social science research from qualitative ethnographic methods to quantitative survey instruments; use library databases to categorize relevant literature, appraise the strengths and weaknesses of academic arguments, use evidence to support arguments.
- Critical Thinking: Modify and apply a critical and well-grounded understanding of multiple worldviews and perspectives, experiences, power structures, and ethical and cultural positions in relation to contemporary global issues.
- Content Knowledge: Describe, explain and apply basic knowledge of the historic and contemporary role and effects of different actors in the global system (e.g., multilateral and bilateral organizations, development agencies, social movements, nation-states, civil society, business, and philanthropic and non-governmental organizations).
- Content Knowledge: Describe and discuss the history, culture, society, geography and political economy of a major world region, and its relations to global political economic processes.
- Content Knowledge: Describe, summarize and transfer basic knowledge of a professional concentration area onto a real-world career objective.
- Content Knowledge: Connect course content surrounding political systems, health, history, culture, economics, or education, to a set of intercultural experiences.
- Communication: Demonstrate receptive and productive proficiency in at least one language other than English.
- Communication: Convey complex information and ideas in written English that are clear, robust, carefully edited, well organized, and stylistically engaging and accessible.
- Communication: Interact with people from a diverse range of cultural, religious, ethnic, and national backgrounds in a way that is respectful and informed. Use knowledge and skills to develop and advocate for informed, appropriate action to solve complex problems in the human and natural worlds.

Global Studies Major Requirements

Code	Title	Credits
Preparatory Courses		8
GLBL 101	Introduction to Global Issues
GLBL 102	Foundations for Intercultural Competence
Block A: International Core Foundation		16
GLBL 230	Global Wellbeing
GLBL 240	Perspectives on International Development
GLBL 250	Value Systems in Cross-Cultural Perspective
GLBL 270	Globalization and the Global Economy
Block B: Professional Concentration Area		16
Either Internal Block B Option 1: Four upper-division courses (16 credits) in one of 4 areas of concentration or External Block B Option 2: four upper-division GLBL courses (16 credits) plus a minor/certificate in any other UO department. See professional concentration areas list and tables. Students are allowed to declare only ONE professional concentration area. [1]
1) Internal Block B Option: Choose 1 of 4 Professional Concentration options. Earn 16 credits total: A) 1 or 2 required GLBL course(s) (4-8 credits); B) 2 or 3 electives (8 or 12 credits); C) All credits must be upper division.
2) External Block B Option: A) Complete any minor or certificate in any other UO department; B) In addition, breadth requirement of 4 additional GLBL courses; C) If a GLBL course is counted towards the minor/certificate, it may also count among those 4.
Block C: Geographic Focus		16
Four upper-division courses on one of the following areas: Africa, Europe, Southeast & East Asia, South & Central Asia, Latin America & Caribbean, Middle East, and North America; at least one of the four must have the GLBL subject code. See geographic focus areas list and tables. [2]
Total Credits		56

[1] Students may design their own professional concentration area if none of the predefined areas fits the student's professional goals. Students who choose this option must designate one of the core faculty members of the Department of Global Studies as an advisor and work with that individual in designing the concentration.

[2] As many as 4 credits in a third-year language sequence may be used to fulfill the geographic focus requirement. Appropriate courses should have significant course content on the region of study. Areas of focus may include Africa, Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean, the Middle East, North America, South and Central Asia, and East and Southeast Asia. A North American geographic focus is only open to international students.

Additional Requirements

Courses must be passed with grades of C- or better to satisfy major requirements. In addition, three years' proficiency in a second language is required (see below for details).

Courses applied to the major, with the exception of the language requirement and up to 8 credits in Field Studies: [Topic] (GLBL 406) or Terminal Project (GLBL 409), must be taken for letter grades.

A maximum of 12 credits in courses taken to fulfill the university area requirements may be applied toward the global studies major.

A maximum of 20 credits in courses taken in a single department other than global studies may be applied toward the global studies major, exclusive of the language requirement and the External Block B Professional Concentration option.

For the most current information about courses and requirements, visit the department website.

Language Requirement

To satisfy this requirement, students must achieve proficiency in a second language at a level associated with three years of study. Proficiency in the language may be demonstrated by passing three terms of a 300-level language sequence with grades of mid-C or better, by an examination, or by graduating from a high school in which English was not the medium of instruction.

A student may also fulfill the language requirement with two years' proficiency in two different languages exclusive of the student's native language. Students wishing to pursue this option must get approval from the director of undergraduate studies faculty.

Intercultural Experience

The Global Studies Major requires a significant intercultural experience to fulfill the major requirements. An experience is intercultural when it involves direct engagement with people from a cultural group or subcultural group that is significantly different from the participant's own background.

To meet this requirement, experiences should provide the opportunity to:

1. Explore multiple worldviews and perspectives, experiences, power structures, and ethical and cultural positions in relation to contemporary global issues.
2. Connect course content surrounding political systems, health, history, culture, economics, environment, or education, to a set of intercultural experiences.

Interact with people from a diverse range of cultural, religious, ethnic, and national backgrounds in a way that is respectful and informed. Use knowledge and skills to develop and advocate for informed, appropriate action to solve complex problems in the human and natural worlds.

A sustained intercultural experience is a core component of our program. Students may fulfill this requirement via study or internship abroad, or via local intercultural engagement. Please consult with your faculty advisor to tailor your plans for your personal academic and professional aims.

Option #1 - A credit-bearning intercultural experience consisting of at least 4 credits (e.g., GEO study abroad, GlobalWorks internship, or a credited research experience such as GLBL 406 or 409). This option does not need to be pre-approved by the Director of Undergraduate Studies.

Option #2 - A non-credit-bearing intercultural experience consisting of a minimum of 120 hours of engagement (e.g., internship with an organization). Prior to applying for or starting an experience for Option #2, students should first contact the Intercultural Experience coordinator for pre-approval, and provide a one-paragraph abstract detailing how they foresee the proposed opportunity will meet the criteria enumerated on the Department of Global Studies website.

Following completion of the experience, for verification, students will choose from:

- 8-10 page reflection paper
- Academic poster
- Multi-media product (blog, story map, program evaluation, project report etc).

Verification, which should address how the opportunity involved the above criteria, will be submitted to Intercultural Experience Coordinator (not the advisor) for approval.

Approved field experiences for the Global Health Minor (https://ghprogram.uoregon.edu/) may count toward the intercultural experience requirement.

Overlap Policy

- 16 credits can be overlap with another major
- 8 credits can be overlap with another minor

Block B: Professional Concentration Areas

- External Block B (p. 2)
- Internal Block B
  - Global Business, Technology, and Communication (p. 2)
  - Global Governance, Diplomacy and Human Rights (p. 3)
  - Global Wellbeing: Health, Food and Education (p. 4)
  - Sustainable Development and Environment (p. 5)

External Block B Option

1. Complete any minor or certificate in any other UO department;
2. In addition, breadth requirement of 4 additional INTL/GLBL courses;
3. If a INTL/GLBL course is counted towards the minor/certificate, it may also count among those 4.

Block C: Geographic Focus Areas

Choose 1 of the following 7 Geographic Focus options. Earn 16 credits total:

A) 1 required GLBL course (4 credits)

B) 2 or 3 electives (12 credits)

C) All credits must be upper division.

As many as 4 credits in a third-year language sequence may be used to fulfill the geographic focus requirement. Appropriate courses should have significant course content on the region of study. Areas of focus may include Africa, Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean, the Middle East, North America, South and Central Asia, and East and Southeast Asia. A North American geographic focus is only open to international students.

Students may submit a substitution request to use one term (4.00 or 5.00 credits) of introductory (100 or 200-level) language for their geographic focus requirement, and, as long as it is confirmed as different from the language the student is using for their 3-year language requirement for the major, the substitution will be approved. Students seeking this exceptional substitution should discuss the matter with Global Connections Advisors in the Tykeson College & Career Advising unit.

Four-Year Degree Plan

The degree plan shown is only a sample of how students may complete their degrees in four years. There are alternative ways. Students should consult their advisor to determine the best path for them.

Bachelor of Arts in Global Studies

Below is an example of how to complete a BA in global studies with a diplomacy and international relations professional concentration and a Middle East geographic focus. Since the major offers 16 options for professional concentration areas and seven different geographic focus regions, with a wide variety of courses that can count toward each concentration, there are innumerable paths through the global studies major.

This degree plan is for general planning purposes only and, due to the interdisciplinary nature of the major, it is imperative that students speak with advisors to determine which courses would best match their personal, professional, and academic goals.
