Courses in language, literature, film, visual arts, and other media from many different regions and periods offer students the chance to explore the breadth and depth of the cultures of the Spanish-speaking world. Students gain knowledge of the linguistic structure of the language and its different varieties and are exposed to the historical and social contexts of Spanish-speaking communities, highlighting the social characteristics of communities where Spanish is used.

Program Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of this program, students will be able to:

- Language proficiency: RL majors should reach at least a level of Intermediate-High (speaking) and Advanced (writing) in the primary target language according to ACTFL proficiency standards.
- Analytical skills related to the field/target language (research and writing): RL majors should be able to \ a) use basic tools/methods of analysis in either literary studies or linguistics , \ b) use technical vocabulary for literary analysis and criticism or linguistic analysis, \ c) demonstrate mastery of technical aspects of professional writing (manage bibliographic resources, document ideas using MLA or APA style, include in-line citations in writing, etc.)
- Content objectives (literature/culture): Demonstrate familiarity with examples of the cultural/artistic production in the target language from different historical periods. Identify authors, texts, themes, and literary/artistic/intellectual movements in the periods studied. Relate cultural artifacts (literature, film, fine arts) to the historical, cultural, and social contexts in which they were produced. Content objectives (language in society-Spanish): Identify the geographical distribution and historical origins of varieties of Spanish; recognize variation as a fundamental part of language, and explain the kinds of sociolinguistic variation (historical, social, geographic) that can occur in languages; explain the relationship between and language and identity; demonstrate understanding of methods of linguistic data collection and analysis.
- Discipline (humanities or social science): identify basic disciplinary questions that define literary analysis/cultural studies or sociolinguistics; apply or relate disciplinary questions to current debates in the arts, politics, social conflicts, etc.
- Writing: write logical, convincing critical argument as response to a critical question, using evidence from primary literary and historical documents as well as secondary essays by modern scholars. Demonstrate continued improvement in written expression in Spanish, with increased attention to accuracy and fluency.

Courses for the major are principally taught in the language of study and immerse students in a diversity of cultures and variations spoken. Cultural, linguistic and literary production – writing, film and other media – studied in RL courses reflect variations of race, gender, social class, climate, religion, and historical and artistic movements and counter-movements.

Spanish Major Requirements

Courses used to fulfill the major requirements must be taken for a letter grade and passed with a grade of C- or better. Coursework transferred in from Advanced Placement or International Baccalaureate exams are acceptable with a mark of P*.

- Maintains at least a 3.75 GPA in all upper-division department course work and at least a 3.50 GPA overall, and submits an honors thesis written under the guidance of a Romance languages faculty thesis advisor.
