

Your baby loves being with you and playing with family.

As they become more aware of others around them your voice and touch are calming, letting them know they are safe.

Things to Try

“Talk” with your baby. When your baby makes a sound, make the same sound back them. Go back and forth as long as possible.

Your baby likes to hear new sounds. Talk to them about what they are hearing. Learning about sounds helps them understand their world.

Sometime your baby fusses because they are ready to explore! Let your baby stand while you support them to see things from a new view! Try moving them to another room or go on a walk together, inside or outside.

What to Expect

Your baby responds to your smiles and sometimes laughs when looking at you.

Your baby may be frightened by loud or unfamiliar noises.

Sometimes your baby sucks on their fingers or hands to calm down.
